

FROM THE Editor

By Michael MacCAMBRIDGE

Someone once said about the job of raising children that, as hard as you're afraid it's going to be, you wind up wishing it had been that easy.

So it was with the ESPN College Football Encyclopedia, which attempted—and to a great extent, succeeded—in presenting the sport with its first definitive reference work in generations. Sports Illustrated's review noted, "Let us give thanks to the college football gods, for unto us a bible is given."

The critical and commercial response was tremendously gratifying for the dozens of people who spent years of their lives working on this book. Of course, our great regret was that it couldn't be perfect. There are literally millions of facts in this book, and, inevitably, some errors crept in as well.

As with any history book that attempts to be comprehensive, much of the most pressing research involved areas that were poorly recorded in the first place and resistant to any attempts at standardization. That is why the early annual reviews were so skimpy in comparison to those of later years, and why many schools' individual statistical leaders before the '50s or '60s are not listed.

Some apparent errors came about because of our persistent attempts to standardize material. (We know the Big Eight was originally the Big Six; we referred to it as the Big Eight throughout the standings pages in the annual reviews as a way to provide continuity.)

And just as the joys of parenthood are diverse and ineffable, the response we received from many of the tens of thousands of readers who bought the book has been a wonder to behold. Even those apoplectic about one thing or another—the score of South Florida's first game, or our decision to refer to USC as "Southern Cal" in the season summaries—only served to prove the level of passion that college football fans have for their sport. That is why we wanted to publish the book in the first place.

Thank you for reading—and for going through the trouble to point out our errors. We will continue working to make the next edition of the Encyclopedia even better than this one, and to make the ESPN College Football Encyclopedia a vital part of any sports fan's library.

CORRECTIONS

Page	Section	ELEMENT	Year	Correction
549	Profile/Records	Missouri	---	Zack Abnon is the career-rushing leader.
552	Statistical Leaders	Missouri	---	Hank Kuhlmann was the 1956-57 rushing leader.
627	Profile/Records	Northwestern	---	Brett Basanez holds the single-season passing yardage record.
645	All-Time Scores	Notre Dame	1997	The bar for the Independence Bowl should be placed above its opponent, LSU.
658	Essay/Numbers	Ohio State	---	Six Buckeyes have had their numbers retired—Howard Cassady (40), Eddie George (27), Archie Griffin (45), Chic Harley (47), Les Horvath (22) and Vic Janowicz (31).
659	Essay/Lore	Ohio State	---	Buckeye coach Wes Fesler resigned suddenly in 1950 to go into private business.
782	Profile/Worst of Times	South Florida	1997	South Florida won its inaugural football game, routing Kentucky Wesleyan 80-3.
1167	Annual Review	Michigan	1935	Michigan should be listed only in the Big Ten Conference.
1236	Annual Review	Virginia	1954	Virginia should be listed only in the Atlantic Coast Conference.
1266	Annual Review	WAC Standings	1962	New Mexico won the conference title (2-1-1, 7-2-1 overall).
1289	Annual Review	UP Poll	1969	The Jan. 2 UP poll is a duplicate of the Dec. 8 poll and should be ignored. The Dec. 8 UP poll was the final poll.
1374	Profile/Records	SEC Standings	1990	Beside Florida there should be an asterisk with the footnote: "not eligible for title."
1439	Rose Bowl	---	1995	Before the game, Northwestern was No. 3 and USC No. 17. After the game, NU was No. 8 and the Trojans No. 12.
